

Susan Gianevsky holds qualifications in both Education & Natural Medicine. She is the Health Ambassador for Martin & Pleasance having formulated a range of their natural medicines that are sold nationally and internationally.

Susan has been with Martin & Pleasance for more than 25 years and continues to be the health educator specializing in the impact minerals have on activating cellular health as well as running 2 clinics in Melbourne.

Susan writes articles on women's health & for health magazines. She has also written a book on the impact micro minerals can have on ongoing wellbeing and is often invited to speak on radio and conferences on the passion that has dominated her career to date.

Susan loves teaching health across Australia and especially in Canada where the products she has formulated are very popular and continue to grow in popularity.

Travelling nationally and internationally for M&P and sharing her passion, knowledge and findings on the importance of building stronger internal foundations that encourage good health and wellbeing across the world continues to inspire Susan to share with even more people she meets.
